

About the Authors

Supong Tangkiengsirisin is an Assistant Professor at the Language Institute, Thammasat University, where he currently holds the position of Vice Director for Training and Assessment Services. He earned a B.A. (Honors) and an M.A. in English from Chulalongkorn University, and is now pursuing his Ph.D. in English Studies with the University of Nottingham, U.K. His interests range from teaching ESP classes at the undergraduate level to teaching academic and business writing to graduate students. His recent academic works include the compilation of EL 211 (English for Health Science1) and EL 281 (English for Sociologists and Anthropologists 1) textbooks.

Ketvalee Porkaew received her Ph.D. in Second Language Acquisition and Teacher Education from the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. Currently, she is an assistant professor of the Language Institute, Thammasat University, where she also holds the position of Vice Director for Planning. Her areas of interest include second/ foreign language acquisition, EFL reading, and research in EFL teaching and learning.

Edward B. Geerson has been an undergraduate ESP instructor and graduate lecturer at the Language Institute since 1995. His courses at Thammasat University include Foreign Language Acquisition and the Practicum for the MA-TEFL Program, cross-cultural communication and linguistics courses in international programs, and conducts teacher-training programs for in-service teachers. Formerly the director of an international exchange program with the Monterey Institute in California, he has taught in China, Korea, Hong Kong, New York and Berlin. Currently, he serves as Advisor to the Vice Rector for International Affairs at Thammasat. Vygotsky is a relatively recent research interest for him, too.

Sirirath Chunnasart works as a Social Development Technical Officer (Level 5) at the Office of Women's Affairs and Family Development, having graduated with an M.A. in Gender and International Development from the University of Warwick under a Royal Thai Government scholarship. Prior to that, she earned her B.A. (Second-class Honors) in English from Chulalongkorn University and an M.A. in English for Careers from Thammasat University.

Pratin Pimsarn received his Ph.D. in Reading and Language Arts from North Texas State University. He is an Associate Professor and Director of the Language Institute, Thammasat University. He teaches ESP, reading, and writing courses both at the undergraduate and graduate levels. His specialization is in teaching reading and writing using the Language Experience Approach. His research interests include reading and writing relationships.

Satita Watanapokakul received her B.A. in English from Chulalongkorn University and an M.A. in Teaching English as a Foreign Language from Thammasat University. She is a Ph.D. candidate in the English as an International Language Program at Chulalongkorn University. Her fields of interests range from teaching large classes to Active Learning Instruction. Satita has authored three instructional textbooks: English Wordbuildings from Prefixes and Roots; English Vocabulary and Usage for Entrance; and English Tests for U.

Lieutenant Apira Pangsapa is an English Instructor at the Royal Thai Navy Language Center, Royal Thai Navy Headquarters, where she currently holds the positions of both English and Spanish Instructor. Her main responsibilities are to improve the English language proficiency of Naval students who have been awarded scholarships to further their studies abroad and those who will be posted to overseas assignments. She is also responsible for Spanish language instruction for Naval Cadets who will be studying at the Naval Military School in Spain. She earned her B.A. from Chulalongkorn University and an M.A. in Teaching English as a Foreign Language at Thammasat University.

Parintorn Sanitmatcharo earned a B.A. in English and M.A. in English for Careers from Thammasat University. During her undergraduate study, she was a TU exchange student at Soka University in Tokyo, where she first became interested in intercultural communication and tourism. Her work experience ranges from five years as a flight attendant to a secretary at public and private international organizations. In 2004, she was an English lecturer for undergraduate students at the Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences, Thaksin University, in her hometown Songkhla. She is currently pursuing her interests in ESP teaching for the airline industry, translation and Japanese language in Bangkok.

Wanwisa Phanda has been working at the Stock Exchange of Thailand (SET) since her graduation. She earned a bachelor's degree (Second Class Honors) from Thammasat University in 1995 in the Faculty of Commerce and Accountancy, majoring in Finance and Banking. At present, she is the supervisor of the Corporate Governance Center at the SET. Her job responsibilities include frequent use of the SET Library facilities and services. The textbooks, information about foreign countries, and journals are her main sources of information. In Thailand, the SET Library is expected to be the most complete source of all stock market information. From her eleven years at the SET, she knows that the SET Library is a focal point of the SET. To improve its services to best serve customers, a user satisfaction survey is needed.