

About the Authors

Ali Akbar Ansarin is an associate professor of English at the Department of English at the University of Tabriz, Iran. His recent research interest areas are psycholinguistics, second language acquisition. He is currently the head of the Department of English.

Chirasiri K. Vivekmetakorn is a lecturer in the M.A. in Applied Linguistics Program, Mahidol University. She received her Ph.D. in Language Education from the University of Leeds. Her research interests include interlanguage pragmatics and discourse.

Feng Teng is a lecturer and researcher at the department of English, Nanning University, China. He has done intensive research on EFL vocabulary teaching and learning. His recent publications appeared in ELTWO, LEARN Journal

Meentra Thamma is an M.A. student in Applied Linguistics at Mahidol University. Her interests are spoken language and teaching speaking.

Mohajjabe Barea holds MA degree in English Language Teaching from Aras International Campus of The University of Tabriz. She has been teaching English for high school student since her graduation. Her interest areas are ELT and psycholinguistics.

Monthon Kanokpermpoon is a postgraduate research student in the PhD programme in Educational and Applied Linguistics at the School of Education, Communication and Language Sciences, Newcastle University, UK. He is also lecturer in English language teaching at the Language Institute, Thammasat University. His research interests feature TESOL and Cognitive Load Theory, which appear in several scholarly articles in Thailand.

Soisithorn Isarankura graduated with an M.A. in Linguistics and ELT from the University of Leeds, U.K., and a Ph.D. in English as an International Language from Chulalongkorn University, Thailand. Her research interest is in Second Language Acquisition. Her papers include acquisition of English articles, tense and aspect, prosody and pronunciation.

Sucharat Rimkeeratikul is an associate professor at Language Institute, Thammasat University. She completed her Ph.D. in Interpersonal Communication and Master's Degree in Language and International Trade from Eastern Michigan University, USA. She graduated with a B.A. in English from Liberal Arts, Thammasat University. Her interests involve communication apprehension, anxiety in L2, intercultural communication and ESP.

Vilavain Aroonmanakun is an assistant professor at the Language Institute, Thammasat University. She completed two master's degrees in Linguistics, and in Mass Communication at Chulalongkorn University. Her research interests include English corpus linguistics and cognitive semantics. More specifically, her work examines the semantics of English and Thai spatial prepositions by using language corpora and image schemas for semantic representation