

Contributors

Andrew Jocuns

Andrew Jocuns is a sociolinguist (PhD Georgetown 2005) currently working as a lecturer in the linguistics program in the Department of English & Linguistics at Thammasat University in Bangkok, Thailand. His research has focused upon Southeast Asia (Indonesia, Thailand), learning sciences, informal learning, multimodal discourse analysis, nexus analysis, linguistic landscapes and mediated discourse theory.

Email: jocunsa@gmail.com

Anita Sundaresan

Anita Sundaresan is a lecturer at Asia-Pacific International University, Thailand. Her research interests include sociolinguistics and English language education.

Email: anita@apiu.edu

Chatchawan Chaiyasat

Chatchawan Chaiyasat is a graduate student in Master of Arts in English Language Studies, Department of English and Linguistics, Faculty of Liberal Arts, Thammasat University. His research interests are (critical) discourse analysis, corpus linguistics, teaching English as a foreign language, and intercultural communication.

Email: woodychatcha@gmail.com

Daron Benjamin Loo

Daron Benjamin Loo is an instructor at the Centre for English Language Communication, National University of Singapore, Singapore. His research interests include student and teacher identity, discourse analysis, and teacher professionalism.

Email: elcdb1@nus.edu.sg

Esther Hungyo

Esther Hungyo is an instructor at Asia-Pacific International University, Thailand. Her research interests include language learning strategy and motivation.

Email: esther@apiu.edu

Ezia Meliany Gabu Joihin

Ezia Meliany Gabu Joihin recently graduated from Asia-Pacific International University, Thailand with a bachelor's degree in English language (TESOL). Her research interests include student identity and language learning strategies.

Email: ezia.gabu@gmail.com

Kanlaya Promwatcharanon

Kanlaya Promwatcharanon received her Bachelor's and Master's Degree in Teaching English as a foreign language, Faculty of Education, Chiang Mai University. Her research interests include critical pedagogy, teaching methods and communicative English. She is Head of the English Education Program in the Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences at Chiang Mai Rajabhat, Thailand.

Email: yangeunabcd@gmail.com

Melada Sudajit–apa

Melada Sudajit–apa is an Assistant Professor in the Department of English and Linguistics, Faculty of Arts, Thammasat University. She obtained her PhD in Applied Linguistics from the University of Edinburgh. Her research concerns EFL teaching methodologies, materials development, critical discourse analysis, language and identity, and discourse and society.

Email: meladas@gmail.com

Phanida Simaporn

Phanida Simaporn (PhD) is an Associate Professor in the Department of English and Linguistics, Faculty of Liberal Arts, Thammasat University. Her research interests include English and American literature in the nineteenth and the twentieth centuries and translation.

Email: pndstillwater@yahoo.com